To Whom It May Concern
October 2008

I am happy to be able to provide a letter of recommendation for Greg Lemoine. We have worked closely together during the past two years at the International School of Phnom Penh in Cambodia. During this period Greg has worked as specialist teacher in the area of special needs as well as being the technology teacher for our Elementary school. Both of these roles have meant he has worked with students from 3 to 12 years. Greg is an extremely caring person who always puts student's needs first. He ensures that he works to maximize learning opportunities for everyone. As the technology teacher he has reviewed and redeveloped management systems that have enabled all staff to have better access to technology equipment and opportunities. He has empowered the local support staff with them being more responsible for the maintaining of equipment and resources. He has facilitated many professional development workshops for faculty and teaching support staff. Greg and I have worked together as part of the media centre and have meet regularly to ensure the best learning opportunities occur for students. Greg has consistently examined ways to make improvements and uses a collaborative approach when gathering information. He has been part of a PYP learning environment and has actively sort opportunities to connect technology with classroom programmes. He shows understanding of the pedagogy and learning style associated with the PYP and is prepared to explore new ideas and methods to deliver a programme that will meet the individual needs of all his students. He has attended workshops in order to learn and understand more about his specialist role within the programme.

All our students like Greg and his comfortable style. They know he will listen and take care of their feelings. Parents respect his work and Greg has positively supported a number of students who were meeting with him for some aspect of special needs.

Greg is approachable and enjoys being able to offer his expertise or support in areas other than his specific roles. His contribution to extra-curricular activities at school is significant and will be missed. He has an excellent sense of humour and has the ability to appreciate his own mistakes and grow from them.

All the staff enjoys his sense of humor and friendly style and will miss his contributions at all levels of school life.

I wish him well in the future and think he is worthy of any opportunities he chooses to seek out.

Regards,
